

Debs, Pete and Isaac

From our hearts to yours, thank you for taking the time to look at our family. We would dearly love to hear the patter of more little feet in our home and hold our arms open wide with the possibility of this happening soon.

A silly road trip moment. Isaac, Pete and Debs.

Debs - I am stay at home Mama, student and volunteer, providing prenatal classes and peer support for new parents and parents to be. I have loved being a home-based mum, treasuring many moments in Isaac's life, especially the super close bond we have as a result of growing and learning together. I am so excited to have the opportunity to raise another little one, close by and connected. I love yoga, trail running, family hiking and mountain biking, camping and adventures. There are so many things to see and learn in the world, I love that we can share many of these experiences as a family and come home and snuggle together with a book, hot chocolate and a fire.

Family ski day. We lived in Whistler for just over two years. Isaac learnt to ski and mountain bike and we made life long friends

We are a little family of three, Debs, Pete and Isaac and we live with a million chickens (well not quite but it feels like it!), two goats, two dogs, two cats and a Guinea pig, on beautiful Salt Spring Island. We are lovingly renovating our new home and putting down deep roots in Canadian soil. Isaac attends an awesome outdoor school on the Island and we have been warmly enveloped within its community. We have three sets of parents who visit us regularly from the UK and New Zealand, sometimes together and sometimes with brothers and sisters and cousins too. All of our family is so supportive and excited to welcome a new little one.

Pete and Debs. The month we met. It was as though we had been waiting our whole lives for this connection. It was also both our 30th birthdays the year this was taken a decade ago.

Pete - I work flexibly from home as an entrepreneur, consultant and investor on projects with a positive social or environmental impact. More often than not, I am here renovating, building or just tinkering. We all love being active in nature and to travel and explore as a family. I sometimes travel for work too which I enjoy; new cultures and countries have always interested me. I love animals, games, reading, attempting to cook, mountains, beaches, learning new stuff, technology and making things. Above all I adore being with our family and I can't wait to welcome a new little one into our home and heart.

Isaac is a super smiley little man who loves to make people laugh. He is loving and very cuddly, happiest outdoors and connected to nature. He loves riding his bike, robotics, technology and airplanes. He is a bit of a bookworm and loves to make friends. He is looking forward to becoming a big brother and has kept some of his favourite 'little' toys safely in a box for that special person when they come into our lives.

Our life and Parenting - As a family, we try to live our daily lives with love and gratitude. We see our role as providing a safe and loving nest in which our children feel secure and unconditionally loved. Our values are modeled around empathy, support and acceptance. We practice attachment parenting and child-lead learning and we connect to our world through family, community and culture. We spend a lot of time together, whether that is snuggled up in bed on a Sunday morning, eating our meals, taking a road trip in our trailer, camping with friends or visiting other countries and cultures.

Openness - We would very much love the opportunity to be considered as a family that you feel happy and secure with, to parent your precious child. We are open to being connected in whatever capacity you feel serves where you are at right now or where you may be in the future. It would be an honour to support the writing of this little one's story with you and with them, so that they feel held, loved and have the greatest potential to know who they are.

With all our love and support wherever your journey may take you. Debs, Pete and Isaac.
